About the front cover:

The War Memorial was first erected by the people of Clarenville after WWI to honour and remember those men killed during that time and was added to following the end of WWII. It was originally placed in front of the old Clarenville United Church, later moved to the shopping centre, and finally to its current location across from the town hall.

First World War letter recounts daring escape involving Royal Newfoundland Regiment

Paddon family connects to history, 100 years later

Royal Newfoundland
Regiment who were saved,

Fredrick Wornell's letter,

Fredrick Wornell used to give a few dollars to his family every Remembrance Day.

He knew if it wasn't for the Armistice agreed to in 1918, he wouldn't have the chance.

Wornell was a member of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment during the First World War. He was born in Greenspond in 1897, and died in St. John's in 1987.

Years after the war ended, he took to writing letters to catalogue some of the memories that still stayed fresh with him long after the fighting stopped.

One of the letters outlined a harrowing experience where, with his camp surrounded by Germans, the actions of William "White Line" Antle saved the battalion from certain death at the hands of the Germans.

Rob Paddon, Wornell's great-grandson, says the letters have become part of his family's lore.

He says it's incredible to read a story from a relative about a moment where his bloodline could have stopped.

"It's hard to describe. It's an emotional experience. You can build a connection 100 years later through the stories and letters that he left behind," Paddon said.

Paddon says the letters reveal how close the bonds between soldiers were when death was just around the corner.

"It was very much not about him - it was a tribute to a comrade. It emphasizes the comradery that they had. He was well into his 80s or 90s and to have such a vivid memory of that speaks volumes of the importance of that event."

A few years ago, Paddon and his father, Terry Paddon, did the Trail of the Caribou and used the letters as a guide to retrace Wornell's steps.

“This is one of the few that’s about combat. Most are just funny experiences,” he said.

“We went to the spot - as best we could figure - where he would have learned how to ride a bike.”

Paddon asked that, 100 years later, the story of the daring escape be printed in the newspaper. Here, we grant his wish.

Fredrick Wornell’s letter

Sixty-five years ago, Lord Kitchener pointed his long boney finger at us and said, “Join up, so you can tell your grandchildren what you did in ‘the Great War.’”

Here’s what one grandfather did.

It was April 13th, 1918, a bright clear beautiful day.

The 1st Battalion of the Royal Nfld. Regiment was surrounded. Billy Antle was a Battalion runner. It was his duty to take messages to Brigade Headquarters. He was sent off to Brigade to tell them the story. How in the world he ever got there in broad daylight, without being captured, nobody will ever know from that day to this, but he made it.

When he arrived at Brigade he met Billy Hall, and there hangs another story. Billy Hall was the Brigade runner. He was a Newfoundlander, who had served with the Nfld. Regiment, but, for some time past, had been attached to Brigade Headquarters, which was considered a fairly cushy job, as Brigade runner, but he wasn’t happy. He wanted to get back to his own Battalion, amongst his own friends from Newfoundland. So in September he applied to be transferred back. His application was approved. He was killed in action on October 14th, 1918.

The two Billies went and saw the Brigade Major and told him the story about the Battalion being surrounded. He went off and consulted with this staff. Shortly after, he came back and he asked Billy Antle,

“Billy, do you think you can get back again?”

“Oh yes Sir,” said Billy, “I think so.”

“Well,” said the B.M. “here’s what we are going to do. Of course, we have got to try and save the Battalion, get them out, what’s left of them, if we can. But obviously, you can’t do it in broad daylight, so we will wait until after dark and we will go in again. We will take a roll of white tape with us and we will unroll it as we go and, if we get in, and the Germans haven’t spotted the white tape in the meantime, it will help us to get out again, with, we hope, what’s left of the Battalion.”

It worked.

At about eleven o’clock that night, those of us up in the front line got the message. The Battalion is surrounded. Billy Antle is going to bring us out on a white line. Keep your mouth shut, your ears open, don’t make a sound and follow the leader.

And that’s how Billy Antle became known as “White Line Antle.” He saved the Battalion.

Billy, my friend, you were some man, some soldier. May your soul rest in peace.

The Epitaph

On this mount of dust and ashes.

Let no bitter tear be shed.

He is marching with his comrades.

Somewhere on the road ahead.

He has joined the unseen legions.

Sound for him no solemn Knoll.

He has heard the great Reveillé.

It is morning. All is well.

LEST WE FORGET

Lest we forget.

BROWN, David “Dave”
Service # 1319

Dave was born in Tilton, on September 3, 1892. He enlisted with the Royal Newfoundland Regiment on March 18, 1915 and was sent to war. Dave was one of the sixty-seven men who survived the Battle of the Somme (in the attempt to capture the village of Beaumont Hamel) on July 1, 1916 without being wounded and was decorated for bravery on the battlefield. The records state that Dave Brown fought with distinction in every battle in which the Newfoundland Regiment was involved. He was one of the stretcher bearers who was responsible for recovering the wounded after the guns had ceased, and was directly responsible for saving the lives of Solomon Gosse and Duncan Collins of Spaniard’s Bay who had already crawled into fox holes to die.

After three months rest, Brown’s regiment fought in other more important battles before the war ended. Dave was discharged on March 26, 1919. He received four medals, now owned by his son Wallace, including the Military Medal for being one of sixty-five men who survived without being wounded, Great War for Civilization 1914-1919, War Medal for 1914-1918, the Gallantry Award given on October 12, 1916. Dave Brown passed away on July 2, 1939, at the age of forty-seven. He was a member of The Royal Canadian Legion Branch 9 in Spaniard’s Bay.

The following is the citation accompanying his Military Medal.

“London Gazette, 6th January, 1917. Action Date, 12th October, 1916 – Gueudecourt. For bravery in the field. On October 12th near Gueudecourt in an attack on the German trenches he showed great gallantry. He was one of the first to reach the hostile trench, bayoneted three of the enemy, bombed many dugouts, and during a counter attack he shot seven of the enemy and generally displayed a fine fighting spirit.

HANNAM / HANHAM, John Robert

The Wandsworth Hospital
Where many members of the Royal Newfoundland
Regiment were treated during World War I.*

John Robert Hannam, Hanham, as it later got changed in London, was born to Benjamin and Harriett, née Saunders, of Black Duck Cove on October 24th, 1888.

On August 13th, 1915 he joined the Newfoundland Regiment. John embarked for Southampton with the 1st Battalion to fight the Germans in WWI. He fought on the Western front in France and Belgium. November 20th, 1916 he was admitted to Wandsworth suffering gunshot wounds to his left leg and left shoulder. After his recovery he continued into battle.

March 20th, 1918, John was taken to the 64th Casualty Clearing Station listed as “dangerously ill” with severe gunshot wounds to the chest, with one bullet just centimeters from his heart. He spent several months in the hospital in London, England where they removed the bullets from his leg and shoulder but thought the one near his heart was too dangerously close to attempt removal.

April 4th, 1919 John returned home to Creston. Later, the bullet was successfully removed at the Burin Cottage Hospital.

Just as they have protected and stood up for Canada, we will always stand in support of our veterans.

Canada's brave men and women sacrifice themselves for the betterment of Canada. They have promoted the strong Canadian values of freedom, respect and democracy.

We can all continue this support by contributing to Veterans' groups like the Royal Canadian Legion Newfoundland and Labrador Command. Their efforts in the community educate future generations, support veterans and their families and offer our communities a place to gather.

The Canadian Coast Guard Auxiliary (Newfoundland & Labrador) Incorporated [CCGA (NL) Inc.] is a non-profit, volunteer organization used to augment maritime search and rescue resources in the Newfoundland and Labrador Region.

CCGA members would like to encourage all fishers to keep safety in mind at all times. Having the proper safety equipment on board and in good operating order will not prevent a disaster from happening, but knowing its location and practicing its use will greatly increase your chances of survival.

The CCGA will be celebrating 42 years of successful operation in 2020. Since the CCGA was founded in 1978, its members have been credited with participation in thousands of missions and saving countless lives. Thousands of people are helped each year in marine incidents and millions of dollars of property are saved.

The Canadian Coast Guard Auxiliary has been recognized as one of the best, safest and most cost effective volunteer marine rescue organizations in the world.
